Headline:
Cloudy with hill fog and rain, brighter later.

Today:
Cloudy, misty and cool this morning, with hill fog over higher ground and some outbreaks of rain or drizzle. Cloud breaking this afternoon with some bright or sunny spells developing. A chance of the odd shower over the Peaks remains. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
Becoming increasingly cloudy again this evening, as an area of low cloud and outbreaks of rain arrive from the southwest. Rain may become organised and heavy toward dawn. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Saturday:
Mostly cloudy to start on Saturday with patchy outbreaks of rain. Rain will become increasingly fragmented and showery into the afternoon and evening with a risk of thunderstorms. Drier overnight. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Rather cool with showers developing widely initially. Some perhaps turning heavy and thundery. Becoming brighter through the week with warm sunny spells in between showers.
